Our Philosophy /

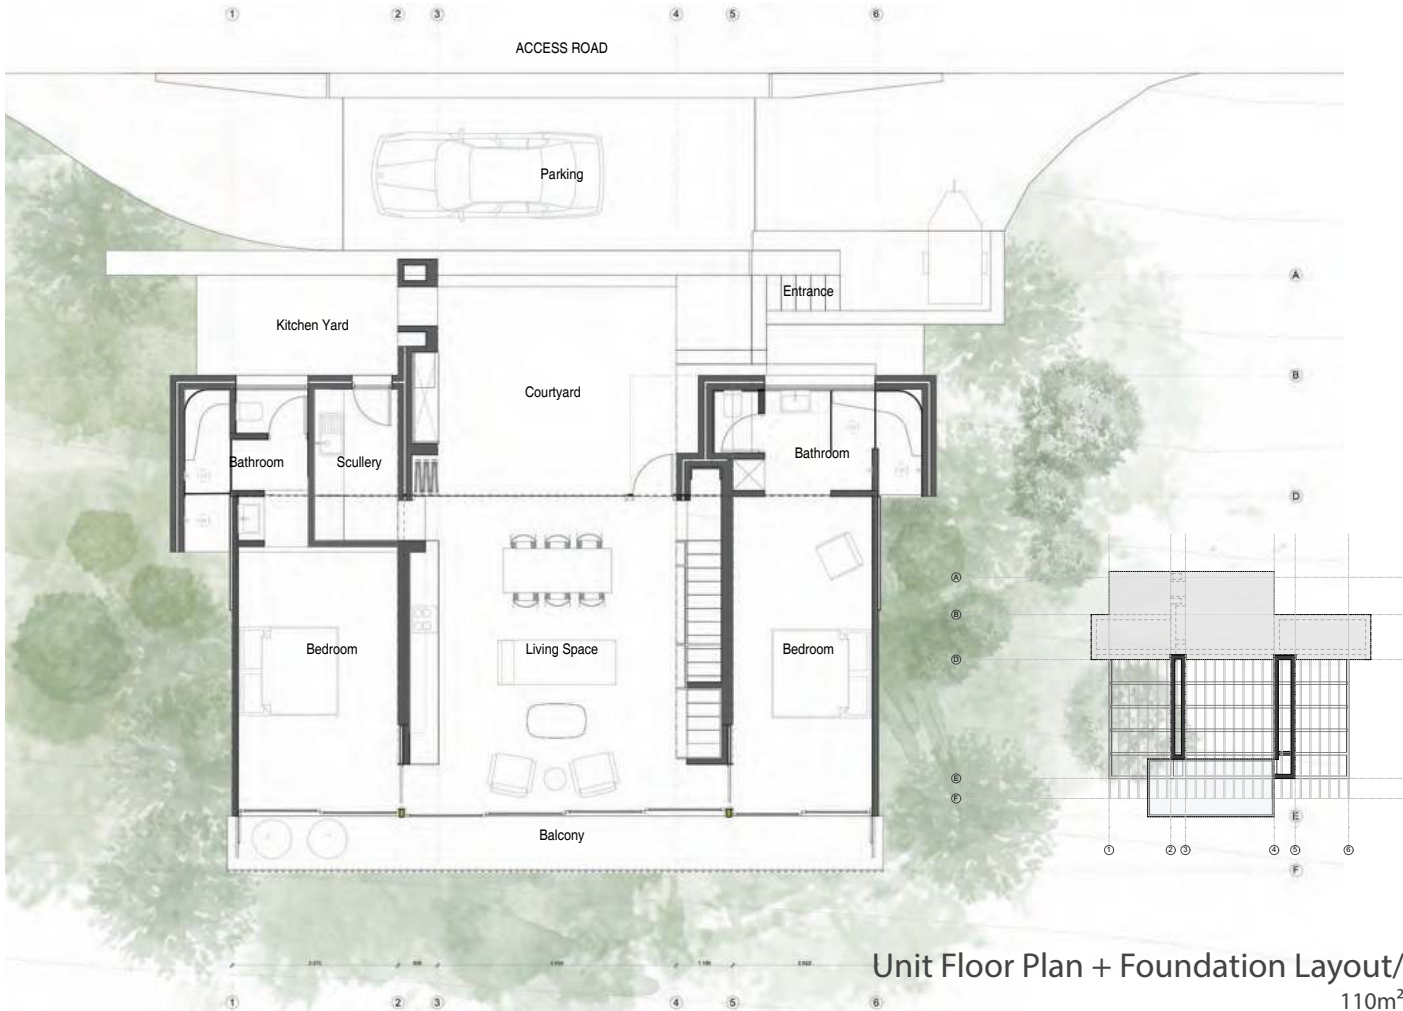

Werkhof, Binnehof and Bauhof are noted for sensitive and humane design, ranging from residential, commercial and industrial buildings. Our philosophy as a design studio is to make buildings which people love. If we accomplish this, the building will become timeless and its lifespan will exceed the limits of a particular style or trend. We consider architecture to be a profession that should serve the public, whether it be a rationally designed work space or a carefully considered family house.

Our design principles focus on restoring the relationship between the natural and the man-made. We always consider two clients; the place on which we build and the people whom we build for. The place is focused around external factors such as the slope of the land, the trajectory of the sun, the vegetation and/or man made infrastructure. The people are the end users of the building, we try to understand exactly what their needs are and how the building can contribute to that.
